DAVE HEATH is a composer and virtuoso flautist.

He has written major works for several of the world's leading musicians and orchestras including: Nigel Kennedy, James Galway, Evelyn Glennie, William Bennett, John Anderson, Marin Alsop, Leonard Slatkin, The Philharmonia Orchestra, The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, and the English Chamber Orchestra.

Several of Heath's pieces; Out of the Cool, Coltrane, Rumania, On Fire, Shiraz and Gentle Dreams, have become standard works for their respective instruments and recorded worldwide.

In 2004 he wrote the score for the HBO documentary about Daniel Pearl The Journalist and the Jihadi and in 2005 a chamber opera Everyday Occurrence.

In 2014 Heath's percussion concerto African Sunrise-Manhattan Rave was performed in the final of the BBC young musician of the year.

Heath also orchestrated and conducted the legendary Pakistani singers Quaturlain Balouch and Shazia Mansoor with the BBC Philharmonic.

As a flute player, DAVE HEATH played principal flute with the London Metropolitan Orchestra for many years, playing on James Bond, Inspector Morse, and Hilary and Jackie movies, and has also recorded solos for Sting, William Orbit, Dominic Miller, Michael Kamen, Barrington Pheloung, and played on the Free Nelson Mandela single by Jerry Dammers.

In 2014 Heath produced Nigel Kennedy's CD Recital.

In 2015 he played solo bass flute on Guy Ritchie's film Man from Uncle, in the world premiere of Martyn Bennett's Grit, and collaborated with Asian Producer Naughty Boy for the BBC Proms.

In 2016 his score for Ahmed Jamal's adaptation of Shakespeare's Measure for Measure Rahm was released in Pakistan.

Since 2013, DAVE HEATH collaborated with artist Maria Rud, virtuoso percussionist Dame Evelyn Glennie, DJ/music producer Dolphin Boy, soprano Rebecca Tavener and punk rock singer Fay Fife on several productions of The AniMotion Show both as composer and performer.

In 2016 new AniMotion Show production Peace-War created by Maria Rud, Dave Heath and DJ Dolphin Boy was premiered in China, Germany and the UK
